W. NICHOLSON IS PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL

All Offices Save Two Were Uncontested

NICHOLSON UNOPPOSED
Gilhooley is President of Union and Montgomery of Rugby Club

The nominations for the Students' Council, which were handed in yesterday, resulted in the acclamations for all the positions with the exception of the position of President of the Hockey Club and that of Secretary of the McGill Union. There appeared to be sufficient interest taken in the elections, but it was a foregone conclusion in practically every case that the members elected would have no opposition.

For the position of President of the Students' Council, W. Nicholson, Law '20, was unanimously elected. Nicholson holds an office on the Students' Council at the present time as Law Representative.

J. Gilhooley was elected to the Presidency of the Union to succeed the present incumbent of the office, Murray McGimmon. At the present time Gilhooley holds the office of Vice-President of the Union.

The only position for which there will be any election, as far as the Council is concerned, is that of President of the Hockey Club. For this position "Ted" Behan and John Galtrey have been nominated, and an interesting election is assured.

Parkins was elected to the position of President of the Athletic Association and Montgomery to that of President of the Rugby Club. Both of these men have been prominent in athletics about the university and are acknowledged as being perfectly fit to fill the positions to which they have been elected.

J. L. O'Brien will be the new President of the Track Club, having also been elected by acclamation. At the present time he is the Arts representative on the Students' Council, and, in addition, is the Secretary of the Track Club.

Leroy will hold the position of Vice-President of the Union. There are three candidates for the position of Secretary—J. V. Galtrey, Arts '20; M. Powell, Science '20, and Owen Trainor, Medicine '20, were all nominated to the position.

The following is a list of the names signed to the various nominations:

We, the undersigned, wish to nominate Capt. W. Nicholson, D.S.O., M.C., to be President of the McGill University Students' Council for the session 1919-20: L. C. Montgomery, A. P. Grigg, H. R. UNION DANCE BIG SUCCESS MANY PRESENT

First Formal Function Was Well Attended

180 PRESENT

Brightly Dressed Crowd Enjoyed Music in Dig Hall

The Union Dance, which was held last night, was a success from every point of view. About 180 dancers were on the floor, and there was at no time any overcrowding, as is usually the case.

The music and refreshments were of a very high order, and everyone seemed to be very well satisfied. As this was the first formal dance held at the college, it was regarded somewhat as a criterion of what may be expected later on. If the dances to be held in the future are as successful, nothing more could be desired.

The patronesses for the dance were Mrs. Moyse, Mrs. Adams, Miss Hurlburt, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. Robinson.

A list of the guests present is printed below:

AN UNUSUAL HAPPENING

In to-day's Daily the list of candidates elected to the various offices upon the Students' Council is published, and every reader will note with a good deal of surprise that all the places but two were filled by acclamation. The question naturally suggests itself, "Is this a desirable state of affairs at McGill?" The answer, we feel, must be a decided negative.

It is all very well to say that in many cases there was but one man who was "in the running" and that to put up another candidate would entail a certain amount of useless trouble and expense; the fact remains that the amount of true "college spirit" existing at the college is nearly always to be gauged accurately by the interest taken in the yearly elections to the posts upon the Council, and that when a state of affairs is reached in which insufficient interest is taken to insure at least two candidates for each office that state is one of stagnation, or something painfully like it.

We can all remember the stirring contests of other days, when feeling sometimes ran rather high, and practically every student was made to turn up at the polls and cast his vote one way or the other, and it is only with regret that we learn that there is to be no such election this year. Surely with the return, at least in part, of peace conditions, it was to be expected that the undergraduates would show a renewed interest in the choice of the men who were to represent them upon the governing body of the students. It is true that the notice given was none too long, but if the men had been truly awake to their duty in the matter this would not have prevented the handing in of the names of many more men than have been presented. Such a lack of enterprise augurs rather ill for the future.

It is not that we are attempting to cast any aspersions upon the composition of the new Students' Council or the student staff of the Union. We think that the men whose names were brought up were excellent representatives of the best element of the college. None the less, we should like to have seen them given "a run for their money," and we feel that we are not overstating the matter when we say that such is the feeling of most of the candidates themselves.

MISS SHEDLOCK GAVE LECTURE IN FRENCH

Alliance Francaise Heard Talk on Daudet at R. V. C.

Last evening, in the Assembly Hall of R.V.C., Miss Shedlock showed that she possessed a great talent in the art of story-telling in French as she does in the English language. Mr. Desaulniers, the president of the Alliance Francaise, introduced the speaker.

Miss Shedlock began by saying that she was quite sensible of the honour done to her, an English woman, in asking her to speak in French to a French audience. She said that she would not repeat the lecture she had given in London just after Monsieur Daudet's death, for she thought that a different treatment of her subject would be more suitable to the occasion. Daudet is a name which will not be forgotten as long as the French language exists. She announced that she would recite a few extracts from his works at the close of her talk, and by telling of her meeting with Daudet in Paris would try to give a more intimate touch to her portrait of this great writer.

Some years ago Miss Shedlock was visiting in Paris and was very fortunate in obtaining interviews with many of the well-known writers of the time, among these was Alphonse Daudet. When she received a note from the son to say that his father, although in bad health, would be very pleased to see her the following day, she was overjoyed, for she had a great admiration for Daudet, and had scarcely dared hope that an opportunity of meeting him would be granted her. Daudet, at this time, was in such ill-health that he was unable to walk across the room, but he still retained his interest in the events of the day and was noted for his kindness to strangers.

In speaking of his works, Miss Shedlock said that Daudet loved his characters and lived with them in their joys and sorrows. There is no bitterness in his writings. He differs from Zola in his presentation of life and human nature. Dickens and Daudet have sometimes been spoken of together, but in reality they have little in common. Dickens rejoices in the peculiarities of his characters, Daudet, while showing the humorous side, tries to soften the picture. Place Tartarin and Pickwick side by side, and it is Tartarin who lives in our heart.

As soon as Daudet leaves the subject of the South, a note of pessimism creeps into his work and one notices the difference immediately. In spite of all his trials and experiences he remained a child till the end, and one finds in his books the faults but also the charm of a child looking at life and portraying it with a master hand. He sees all the colours of life, and writes always in the present. He regarded his work as something of great importance and preferred to risk dying of hunger to accepting work which meant the lowering of his ideal. The struggle of his early years always remained in his memory and we find it reflected in his writings.

Miss Shedlock then told the story of the "Sous-prefet," who was busily preparing a speech in his carriage when the grasshoppers suggested that the woods might be a more pleasant place in which to think. The "Sous-prefet" followed the suggestion and the streams, birds, animals and flowers were quite hushed by his grandeur, but having decided that he was not dangerous they began to talk and sing again. Each time the "Sous-prefet" began to work something interrupted and when his servants came to get him they were horrified to find their dignified master lying peacefully among the violets with his speech totally unprepared.

Miss Shedlock then told a story which is not very well known, being a translation of a Provencal tale, "Le Medicin de Cucugnon" had very few patients and spent his time studying. But how could he hope to have patients—for if a man studies he must be wanting to learn something, and if he is learning he must know very little now, and if he knows little he must be ignorant, and if he is ignorant he cannot be a good doctor, and therefore it is not safe to go to him for advice! The doctor perceived the state of affairs and determined to remedy it. He announced that he could not be bothered with the childish art of curing people, but he would bring a dead man back to life, and just to show that he could do it, he would resurrect some one who had been dead some time. The news went around Cucugnon like wild-fire, that on the next Sunday the doctor would bring back to life a dead man, perhaps two, some even said nine or ten. On the appointed day everybody assembled in the cemetery and the doctor professed himself ready to perform the miracle and asked whom they wanted revived. Would they like Simon? No, Simon's widow said he was a good man and they had been very happy, but really she was going to be married again in a few days and she couldn't very well send back the wedding presents. Nanon must not be brought back, for her husband had re-married and think of the trouble it would cause. Pierre would have to have a pension if he came back—and the crops hadn't been very good this year. The old cure was so old and dead that it would be kinder not to resurrect him—and besides those for whom he had searched in vain in the celestial regions. The good cure heard confession all that week and succeeded in effectually converting his flock.

In conclusion, Miss Shedlock told the beautiful little story of "La Vierge a la Creche," which was written by Daudet at the age of 17. The loud applause testified the keen appreciation of the stories by the audience, as well as the beautiful bouquet of flowers which was presented to the lecturer.

By special request, Miss Shedlock then told the story of "La Chevre de M. Seguin." The story, which was told to warn the foolish youth from seeking to see the world, is that of a young goat, who, becoming tired of life at M. Seguin's, determined to go up the mountain and see the world for herself. In spite of warnings she set out and enjoyed herself thoroughly all day, but at night the wolf came through the forest, and the terrified little goat was obliged to defend herself with her horns. Her strength finally gave out and after fighting all night she was eaten by the wolf in the morning.

The nice new cure was so charming. "Well," said the doctor, "since you won't let me bring anyone back to life, I shall have to spend my time keeping you from dying"—and from that time on his practice was large and prosperous.

The next story was that of the cure of Cucugnon, who, in his sermon, told of his dream that one night he went to Heaven and met Saint Peter at the gates. Having announced that he wished to find out how many inhabitants of Cucugnon were in Heaven, he was shown the page reserved for Cucugnon in Saint Peter's record—and it was blank. Very much surprised, the cure proceeded to Purgatory and again found none of his parishioners. Upon descending into the realm of his Satanic Majesty, he discovered all

THEOLOGS SPEAK

The Public Speaking Contest in connection with the Co-operating Theological Colleges was instituted last evening. The Convocation Hall of the Diocesan College was chosen as the scene of action, and here the judges and contestants arrived around eight o'clock.

The contestants had a fairly wide range of subjects from which to choose. These were as follows:

(1) League of Nations; (2) Social Justice; (3) The Work of the British Navy in the War; and (4) Theodore Roosevelt.

Those who took part in the competition were: Messrs. Atkins, de Pinto, Grier, Jackson, Servage and Swan; while, acting as judges, were Dr. Lansing Lewis, K.C.; Rev. Dr. Warriner, and Rev. T. E. Holling. Dr. Lewis also acted as chairman.

After all competitors had spoken on their respective subjects, the judges retired to deliberate, and on their return the chairman, Dr. Lewis, proceeded to prepare his audience for the decision. Pointing out the features which here and there had to be considered by the judges, and offering some kindly criticism, as one who had his youthful struggles in the same art, the chairman announced that by a unanimous vote of the judges the prizes were awarded equally to Messrs. Swan and Servage.

A vote of thanks to the chairman was heartily accorded on motion of Rev. Dr. Warriner, seconded by Rev. T. E. Holling.

UNCLE SALT BASIN—LATE HOURS.

I often tear my hair, and say, "To-night I'm going to hit the hay at ten o'clock p.m.; let other chaps stay up and toil and drain away the midnight oil—it may be good for them—but I am such a tender plant, a fragile vessel, that I can't afford to miss my sleep. Oh, boy, I'm going to beat it home and let my tired cranium (dome) sink in a pillow deep."

But dash the luck, at ten o'clock I look around and get a shock; the work has just begun. And though I jump about and rave and swear I'm hastening to my grave there's not a single one of all the staff who sheds a tear, but Jello gives a horrid leer and I can plainly see that once again the dawn will break before my gloomy way I make up to my bed-room. Gee! I toss about and mumble rot and then jump up and yell, "Great Scott!!! It's half-past eight and I have got to be in class by nine or else 'twill be the look for mine—I make the porridge fly and splash a pint of coffee down and slam my hat upon my crown and run till I'm most die."

Breathes there the man with soul so dead who never to himself has said, "To-night I'm going to be in bed by half-past nine," and then when he crawls home at half-past three groans as he's hunting for the key, "I've been the fish again!!!"

A SUGGESTION.

"By Pluck and Luck" is the title of a Henty book we used to read in our tender years; we respectfully suggest the adoption of the motto by the college in place of the Latin ones now extant. It is comprehensive enough to include all classes of students.

Or Atomism in the Twentieth Century.
(By I. Hurditt.)

She—"A sweet young creature of about eighteen, with trustful eyes.
He—An enthusiastic student, with a good reputation, a soft voice and great discretion.
Scene—The Rink, 8.30 p.m., with a game between McGill and Vics about to commence.

She—My, isn't this exciting. I'm so glad I came.
He—So am I. I knew you'd enjoy it. It'll be a fine game, all right.
She—(With baby-blue stare)—What's that net thing out there. No, wait, don't tell me; I know, it's where they put the puck—that's what you call the thing, isn't it?
He (Astounded at her hockey lore and not cognizant of the fact that she has six brothers who played hockey since they were five years old)—Why, yes, that's right, quite right. Now, you see—
(Vic. team comes on ice.)
She—Hurray, hurray! (sees mistake). Oh, I thought I'd cheer for them now, poor things, as they're so sure to get licked—beaten to-night. Don't you think so, John?
He—Beaten, say kid—er—hang it all, you know—they're psychologically in a false position, so to speak, don't you see?
(McGill team comes on ice.)
She—Who's that man with the queer little cap on?
He—H'r'aw, h'r'aw! Attaboy, Teddy! You're going to clean that bunch up! Oh, you Jawn! (Remembers himself). Got a bit excited then, you know, college spirit and all that. I like to go to these things on account of the stimulating effect on the imagination.
She—(Watching Cully selecting suitable war-club)—I see. But don't you think—
He—Sh! They're starting.
She—Oh, look! There's a girl I know across on the other side of the rink, with—
(Puck is faced.)
He—Go to it, Teddy! Come on, Jim! Poke him in the slats!
She—Are they playing now? (Cully secures and is checked by Slater).
He—Wow! wow! Dirty work! Put 'im off. (Disgustedly). Aw, that referee—
(Slater is checked by Behan).
She—Ooh, I'm afraid that boy has hurt himself.
He—Atta stuff, atta stuff! Bust 'em up! Tackle 'em low! Owooo! (Prolonged howl of rage as referee makes motion towards side). Rottem, rotten! Why, he hardly touched him.
She—See this little fellow with the puck now. (Magee is making a rush).

Doesn't he skate nicely? And he's not half so big as—
He—Good work! Attaboy! Nice one! (Exultingly). I saw a tooth fly that time.
She—Oh, my! I think that's awful. And just when he'd passed everyone else. I don't think that's fair. And he wasn't half so big as—(Slater checks Henny).
He—Oh, didja see that! Dirty, dirty! See they're putting him off.
She—What is that boy skating off for? I didn't see him do anything.
He (forgetting)—Hey, where are your eyes?
She—John, do you know who you are talking to?
He (with awful revulsion)—A thousand pardons. Awfully sorry. Must be the excitement, y' know.
She—Yes, it must.
(Behan passes to Dawes, who scores.)
He—Yeah! Wow! Wow! Wow! (Throws hat into air). Alltime, boys, alltime! Just like that! They're easy, they're easy! Put in a hundred now, fellows.
She—Oh, did McGill score then? I was watching that cute little—(Dineen makes rush and is checked by Magee).
He—Hey, referee, watch those! Don't let 'im get away with that stuff.
(Dineen checks Magee, who is assisted from the ice.)
She—Oh, that poor little fellow. And I thought he was going to score. He isn't half so big as—
He—Atta getting 'em, boys. M.C.G. (Slater scores).
She—Hurray, hurray. I saw that one. Hurray!
He—X!!!
She (cilly)—I beg your pardon?
He (overwhelmed)—Er—I mean, dash it all! By George! Goodness!!
She—McGill is two ahead now, isn't she? Oh, look at that funny boy, with—
He—No, no! Don't you see—(given up in despair).
She—Oh, look! That man took it away and put it—
(Anderson scores).
He—XX!!! ?!!!!
She—Oooh!!! John!!
He (quite oblivious by now)—Come on, now, you guys! Chew 'em up! Bust their ribs in! That's the stuff! Eat 'em alive! Beat up the whole

She—Oooh! John!!
He (quite oblivious by now)—Come on, now, you guys! Chew 'em up! Bust their ribs in! That's the stuff! Eat 'em alive! Beat up the whole
He—(suddenly coming back to senses)—Great Scott! What was I saying? Dear me! Gracious Goodness! Well, well! Hang it!
(Behan makes rush and scores.)
H'r'aw! h'r'aw! Now we got 'im! Go to it, fellows. Keep it going! (To her). You see, now, the score is tied and we're going to put in the next one, so McGill will win.
She—I don't think I like this very well. Let's go home. I think it's perfectly awful the way you've been—
He—???? Oh, I get a little bit excited, y' know, now and then—Holy smoke, didja see that one? Attaboy, Paw! Come on now, boys—
She—Well, all I can say is—
(Russell scores).
He—XX!!! What the—'s the matter with—
She—I'm going home. Take me home, John.
He (quite unheeding)—!!!X!! Come on, you rough-necks, kill the whole bunch! Murder that referee. Off-side! Off-side! By gum. (Gets up and starts to climb on ice).
She (frightened)—Oh, John! (Produces handkerchief). I'm so scared. (Crowd gathers preparatory to jumping on ice; exit she in haste. He throws away hat and starts altercation with neighbour. Band plays the Anvil Chorus).
Curtain.

POET SCORNER.

The following terrific production has reached us and had the usual effect upon our nerves. Kindly note the free use of the word "did" in the first stanza, the object doubtless being to gain emphasis, although this seems hardly necessary. The gentle euphemism with which the "banding of the mitt" is described in this ditty is worthy of attention.

A Romance.

The dazzling stars did fill the sky.
The silvery moon did shine on high,
That glorious night I did sigh,
Outside the R.V.C.

But I did meet a damsel fair,
With big blue eyes and jet black hair;
She "stunned" me with her glassy stare,
Outside the R.V.C.

I gazed at her with eyes of love;
She quickly looked and dropped her

I pressed it fondly to my lips,
And counted just a dozen ribs.
She said, "You'll hear of this in 'Quips,'"

"The Nice Little Distinctions"

You know how much of the success of any Suit or Overcoat depends on what the French call "The nice little distinctions". It is not an extravagance to wear well-made clothes, of good materials.

In fact, it is an economy, because Fit-Reform Clothes wear so much longer, and look so much better, that their cost per season is actually less than any others you can buy.

A great many men—who come to us year after year for their clothes—have proven the economy of Fit-Reform to their complete satisfaction.

Society

The regular meeting of the McGill Chemical Society was held yesterday afternoon, when Dr. A. Stansfield addressed those present on "The Reduction of Iron Ores." The subject matter was a continuation of Dr. Stansfield's discussion delivered before the Physical Society a week ago, but treated of the experimental work as carried out in the Metallurgical Laboratories of McGill under a grant from the Industrial Research Council.

The speaker introduced the subject by briefly referring to the difficulties encountered in the reduction of iron ores by means of an electrical smelting furnace, when the temperature for a rapid successful reduction must be around 1,500 degrees. The problem before the investigators was to find a means of carrying out the reduction at a much lower temperature, about 800 degrees, by a chemical process. This was necessary in order to compete with the ordinary furnace in general use. Hematite was first crushed into definite known grades, mixed with charcoal and heated in a crucible placed in an ordinary laboratory furnace at a definite temperature for a definite length of time. The resulting mass was then analysed for its content of pig iron. Carbon monoxide gas was introduced in subsequent experiments and its influence on the reduction studied. At this point it was discovered that the grade of charcoal was of great importance, and that baked charcoal was much inferior to the raw material. To date, this process has only been found partially successful for hematite ores and inapplicable to magnetite.

Attempts have been made at Toronto by A. J. Stewart to bring about a reduction of the oxides of iron by means of electrolytic hydrogen with fair success, but the method appears too expensive under present conditions for commercial application.

Dr. Stansfield exhibited some of the appliances used in the research, and a general discussion terminated the meeting.

Campus Leaders.

Visitors to Strathcona Hall, the abode of the McGill Y.M.C.A., will have been impressed by the promptness with which their difficulties are attended to, their needs supplied, owing to the activity and unfailing courtesy of the general secretary, R. DeWitt Scott, B.A., familiarly known as "Bob." The following facts with regard to his life and work have been secured as the result of an interview granted to a Daily representative.

Scott was born in Boston, Mass., in 1892. He received his first education at Montreal High School, where he took part in athletics in the line of basketball and hockey. Entering McGill with the class of Arts '15, Scott took one year of his course and completed it with Arts '16. He then went to Harvard for a year, taking a course in History and Economics, and was a member of the Canadian Club there. When he returned to McGill, "Bob" acted as desk attendant in the Redpath Library during the winter of 1917-18, and was next appointed general secretary of the McGill Y.M.C.A. He is at present registered in Theology.

Some interesting little personal items are as follows: Pursuits, riding and swimming; favourite colour, blue—most becoming one, green; pet hatred, camouflaged complexion; favourite author, Moses.

LIST OF EVENTS
FOR TRACK MEET

Meet to be Held in Craig Street Drill Hall March 19th.

Much has been said and written of late regarding the coming indoor track meet, which is to take place in the Craig Street Drill Hall, on March 19th. The Track Club Executive through untiring efforts have drawn up a programme of events which offers chances to men who have specialized in distances varying from 60 yards to one mile. Medals have been secured for the lucky contestants and a very successful meet is anticipated. There will be several relay races which will undoubtedly prove of great interest. This meet is only partly a revival of the grand revival of sports which is coming.

AQUATIC MEET WILL BE HELD IN MARCH

Swimming Club Plans are Nearly Complete—Will be Girls'
Events

Last night the McGill Swimming Club held an important meeting at the Union. Judging from the number present and the enthusiasm manifested there promises to be a bright and active future for aquatic sports at our alma mater.

At the opening of the meeting the following officers were elected for the coming year: Honorary president, S. S. Pitt; president, G. H. Fisk; vice-president, J. C. Elder; secretary, G. G. Millar; treasurer, J. Nottman; med. rep., W. Laishley; Arts rep., G. M. Webster; Sci. rep., D. Lyall.

This new executive will take office immediately, and aims to boost swimming and water polo to a leading place among our college sports.

Mr. Fisk, upon taking the chair, gave an outline of the proposed activities of the club for the remainder of the scholastic year. This programme promises to be most interesting, and will be, without doubt, a large factor in reviving an interest in sport which has so long lain dormant.

On Wednesday next M.A.A.A. will hold their annual open meet, at which McGill will be ably represented. This meet is open to spectators of both sexes, and it is expected that there will be a large turnout from McGill who will try to remember that there is such a thing as a McGill yell. On March 31st an opening meet is to be held by the National Club in their new tank. Here again McGill will be represented, and does not intend to come home empty handed.

The main event of the season, however, will be McGill's own meet, to be held at the Central Y.M.C.A., on probably, March 29th. According to present plans, this will be the largest aquatic event staged in Montreal in the past five years. Several Canadian and international champions have promised to give exhibitions, while home talent of no mean order will be displayed. A novel feature in collegiate sport will be the introduction of ladies' races. This will no doubt prove interesting to our R.V.C. co-eds, and will meet, we hope, with their hearty co-operation.

On the whole, the present spirit seems to indicate that McGill will not be long in regaining her old-time position of prominence in the athletic world. All up, McGill, and support your team.

The Track Club is a pioneer in the field and deserves due credit as such.

Owing to the closing of college during the epidemic of influenza, the customary sports days were cancelled. For this reason our indoor track meet is being held.

The list of events are as follows:

1—60 yards.
2—220 yards (1 lap).
3—440 yards.
4—880 yards.
5—1 mile.
6—Putting the shot (8 lbs.).
7—High jump.
8—3 standing broad jumps.
9—Hop, step and jump.
10—School relay race, 4 laps, 220 yards each.

11—Inter-faculty relay race of 1/2 mile; four relays, 100, 120, 220 and 440 yards.

12—Military relay, 4 laps, 220 yards each.

The list of judges, timekeepers and other officers will be announced shortly.

The only thing remaining to make this affair a phenomenal success is a good turnout. Much has been said and written of late in the editorial, correspondence, and news columns of the Daily regarding college spirit, but notwithstanding this the great attribute does not seem to be much on the increase. Well, now is the time to prove that you agree with a revival of sports. Turn out, if you can't run a mile you can run 60 yards, and vice versa. Show those who give all their time to a furtherance of college activities that you back them up in their worthy endeavours.
